

UNIQUE CANE FOR THE PRESIDENT

S. H. Gilson, Celebrated Pioneer, Carves Walking-stick.

WORK DONE WITH JACK-KNIFE

REMARKABLE CAREER OF MAN TO MAKE PRESENTATION.

"S. H. Gilson to President Roosevelt, May, 1903."

This is the inscription on a thoroughly unique cane which is to be presented to the chief executive of the nation when he arrives in Salt Lake next Friday. Theodore Roosevelt, before he became president, wrote an entertaining book on "The Winning of the West."

S. H. GILSON AND THE CANE HE CARVED WITH A JACK-KNIFE.

This gift will come from one of those sturdy men who struck out more than a half-century ago beyond the Mississippi river and took active part in conquering this great western country.

Samuel H. Gilson of Salt Lake, pioneer, scout, former United States deputy marshal, mining man, discoverer of glaucosine and coal operator, has with his own hands carved a cane of native wood, which will be presented to President Roosevelt as a mark of esteem. The work has all been done with an ordinary jack-knife, which makes the cane all the more remarkable.

The cane is made out of ordinary red cedar, straight but knotty. The knots have been turned to advantage, for every one of them has been carved into a likeness of some western animal. The head of the cane is fashioned into the likeness of an eagle's head. Directly opposite it and a little lower down another knot is carved into the head of a buffalo. Just below the buffalo a band of gold and silver has been placed around the walking stick. One-half is gold, with a star below marked "Utah." The other half is silver, with the attached star marked "West." On the band is the inscription given above. In the wood is carved on one side the shield of Utah and on the other the shield of the United States.

Animals are Reproduced.

Many animals are reproduced in the wood wherever knots occur. There are deer, coyotes, a horned toad, a lynx, a bear, rabbit and a snake, the last named winding its coils about the bottom of the cane. All these were cut in remarkably accurate fashion, with only a jack-knife, without a living model before the eye. A living model immediately after the better setting of the cane in the wood, was an unnecessary, for in his more than fifty years of life in the west, "Sam" Gilson has learned to know intimately all the beasts that inhabit the wilds.

"Sam" Gilson is a pioneer and the son of a pioneer. Three-quarters of a century ago Gilson, Sr., was striking westward from the better settled portions of the young republic. He found Illinois a stretch of rich virgin prairie, and there he took up land and prepared to settle down. Chicago was then a mere village, surrounded by swamp land—in fact, the town itself was on a swamp.

Career of a Pioneer.
"My father had a yoke of brindle oxen," said Mr. Gilson yesterday, in a reminiscent mood. "He stopped over in Chicago, and south of the river was a man who had a yoke of oxen. He offered to deed the land for the oxen, and my father just laughed at him and told him he wouldn't need the land until he wanted to raise cattle. He was practically all the land was good for, as it was a cattail swamp. Now it is in the heart of Chicago and worth many millions."

It was at Plainfield, Will county, Illinois, about forty miles southwest of Chicago, that the next generation was born, in 1826. When he was a boy 15 years of age his father again started westward. At Omaha young Sam de-livered out for himself, and he hired out as a blacksmith's apprentice in 1851, but his employer put him to driving an ox team. He continued that until he was 21, when he drove a team of the first men there. Virginia city was almost nothing and the great idea was in its infancy of development. For two years the young man worked there, and in 1856 he came to Salt Lake. Ever since that time this city has been his home.

Salt Lake in 1860.
When he first saw Salt Lake it was a mere cluster of huts. The largest store was the Jennings establishment, which was so small that customers did not enter, but bought and received their goods through the front window. He was present at the laying of the corner stone of the temple, and was in Utah when the last spike was driven in the Pacific railroad—Union and Central. For twelve years he was United States deputy marshal. This was during troublous times in Utah. The yellow fever raged in progress and the bitter feeling ran so high that bloodshed was of common occurrence. Lawlessness was prevalent, and a deputy marshal's life was in constant peril.

In 1855 he discovered glaucosine, the hydrocarbon which is named after him. With others he started out to look for ozokerite on the Utah Indian reservation. Instead of ozokerite they found immense deposits of a new and purer form of hydrocarbon, which was named glaucosine in honor of the principal discoverer. Many uses were found for the new substance.

Discoverer of Glauconite.
It is the most perfect insulator known. It is largely used in the manufacture of rubber, in paving, and in numerous other ways. Mr. Gilson sold out his interest to the St. Louis company now operating the mines. This company is now shipping three cars of glaucosine a week, which amount will be multiplied by twelve or fifteen as soon as the Moffat road makes direct rail connection with the deposits.

This does not mean that the career of Samuel H. Gilson. He was a mail carrier in the '60s, when he had to run a cantilevered horse and narrowly escaped death every time he ventured out. He was a scout, miner and prospector. He followed many occupations, and all the time he was winning friendship and respect because of his cool bravery, his warm heart and his winning personality. Altogether he is a high example of that type of rugged character which has won the west from barbarism or solitude and made it a foothold for civilization.

NEWSBOY WAS HONEST.
Returned $5 Gold Piece That Was Given Him For Penny.

Arthur Budge, with a bundle of papers under his arm, approached Judge Theodore Botkin yesterday and cried, "Judge, mister, I've found a gold piece, and I've brought it down in my pocket and gave him three pennies, as he supposed. The gold piece, however, took the money and started off. He noticed that one of the coins looked rather peculiar and discovered that it was a $5 gold piece. Immediately he turned it over to the judge. The latter felt a tug at his coat-tails and heard a squeaky voice say:

"Mister, you made a mistake and gave me $5 for a penny."

Judge Botkin looked astonished for a moment, took the gold piece, then handed the lad a bright shining dollar.

"That, my son," said he, "is your reward for being honest."

The boy pocketed the dollar and went away feeling several times richer and a whole lot happier than had he said nothing and pocketed the gold piece.

WIDOW GETS SICK BENEFIT.
Judge Stewart Decides Against Sandy Lodge No. 11, I. O. O. F.

Sandy lodge No. 11, I. O. O. F., must pay the sick benefit which Martin Pearson took out two years ago, and must liquidate the funeral expenses incurred by the widow at the death of Pearson. This was decided yesterday by Judge S. W. Stewart.

Mrs. Pearson sued the lodge for $488, amount of the death benefit, and funeral expenses. The court deducted the $5 funeral expenses from the amount of the sick benefit and gave the widow a judgment for the difference—$483.
